SENIOR MEDICAL ADVISOR – HEALTHCARE ENVIRONMENT

Our client is a world leading research-based pharmaceutical company, with leadership in four major therapeutic areas – anti-infectives, central nervous system (CNS), respiratory and gastrointestinal/metabolic. In addition, it is a leader in the important area of vaccines and has a growing portfolio of oncology products.

We are looking for an experienced Pharmaceutical Physician to explore new ways of working with the constantly changing NHS to provide medical input to the strategic management of the business. The responsibilities will span all therapy areas.

In this high profile role you will work closely with the Portfolio and Partnership Marketing Group. Here you will lead medical input to the company's NHS new ways of working strategy and initiatives eg Joint Working, HES and POINTS. You will also provide strategic input into the development of patient services delivered through pharmacy. This will also involve developing relationships with NHS KOLs and National Policy makers.

Another responsibility will be leading the Digital Medical strategy group which supports the integration of digital tactics and channels into the company.

Our client takes training and development very seriously. They have developed a dedicated team specifically focused on providing and facilitating Higher Medical Training and career development for medical staff within their organisation. If you are successful in this role it will open up broader opportunities within the business, including potential R&D, Corporate and International roles.

You will need a GMC permissible medical degree and the right to work in the UK. Ideally you will be able to demonstrate a continuous record of career achievement through medical affairs positions within the industry. You will have good leadership skills and a profound knowledge of the UK healthcare system.
