

Two Associate Directors – Clinical Development Harefield, Middlesex, Excellent package

An independent specialty pharmaceutical company with a pan-European presence, Norgine is committed to developing products to improve patients' quality of life. Developing medicines for unmet needs, Norgine makes a real difference. They aim to help people live happier, healthier lives. With more than 1200 staff in over 15 countries, the company's philosophy is to invest in people with experience, drive and enthusiasm to directly shape Norgine's future.

We are seeking two experienced Clinical Development Physicians – one for late stage programmes and one for early stage programmes. Managing two or three Clinical Project Managers, and working within a cross functional team, you will lead the medical direction and clinical strategy for the assigned projects.

This will include being responsible for the writing and maintaining of Clinical Development Plans, the design and writing of protocols and ensuring that clinical trials are conducted in an appropriate manner with respect to GCP guidelines, quality, timelines and cost. However, one of the real attractions of the role will be the breadth of exposure and the opportunity to help shape the development of the business.

You will be medically qualified, with the right to work in the UK and be able to demonstrate good career progression within Clinical Development. Experience in the Gastroenterology or Hepatology areas a distinct advantage but not a necessity.
